Tremfya® (guselkumab)

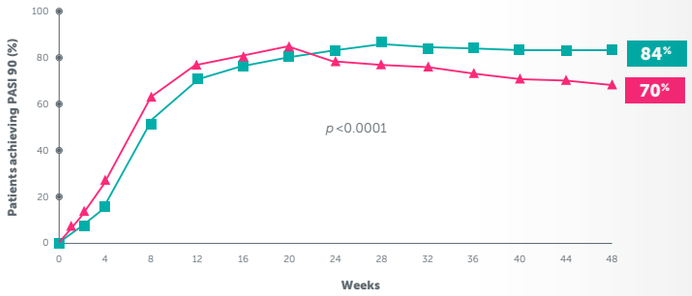

100 mg/ml Solution for subcutaneous injection

CP-266410

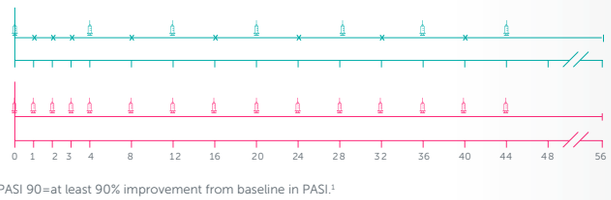

TREMFYA® showed superior long-term efficacy based on PASI 90 at week 48 Vs. Secukinumab[1]

In adult patients with moderate to severe plaque psoriasis

Patients achieving PASI 90* through Week 48[1]

7 active Tremfya® injections

30 active Secukinumab injections

*PASI 90=at least 90% improvement from baseline in PASI.[1]

Significantly more patients achieved and maintained PASI 90 with TREMFYA® compared with secukinumab[1]

ECLIPSE:

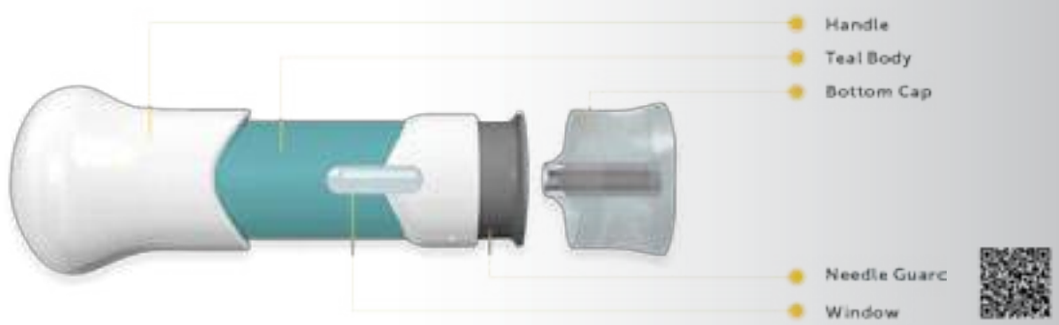

Objective: The primary objective of the ECLIPSE study was to demonstrate superiority of clinical response at week 48 for guselkumab versus secukinumab.[1]

Study design: A phase 3, multicentre, randomised, double-blind, comparator-controlled study.
Patients were randomly assigned (1:1) to receive either guselkumab or secukinumab.[1]
This 56-week study consisted of a masked treatment period (weeks 0–44) and a follow-up period (weeks 44–56). During the treatment period, patients received either guselkumab 100 mg (TREMFYA) by subcutaneous injection at weeks 0, 4, 12, and every 8 weeks thereafter until week 44, or secukinumab 300 mg (COSENTYX) administered as two 150-mg subcutaneous injections at weeks 0, 1, 2, 3, and 4, and every 4 weeks thereafter until week 44.[1]
Overall number of patients (n=1048) : Guselkumab group (n=534) Secukinumab group (n=514)
The primary endpoint was the proportion of patients in each group who achieved a PASI 90 response at week 48. Major secondary endpoints were the proportions of patients in each group who achieved a PASI 75 response at both week 12 and week 48, a PASI 90 response at week 12, a PASI 75 response at week 12, a PASI 100 response at week 48, an IGA score of 0 (cleared) at week 48, and an IGA score of 0 (cleared) or 1 (minimal) at week 48. Other secondary endpoints were the proportion of patients achieving a PASI 90 response, a PASI 100 response, an IGA score of 0 (cleared), and an IGA score of 0 (cleared) or 1 (minimal) over time until week 48.
For the primary endpoint of a PASI 90 response at week 48, 84% Vs the secukinumab group 70%; 95% CI 9,2–19.2; p<0,0001; Consistent results were found in the per-protocol population, 88% guselkumab group versus 76% in the secukinumab group achieving a PASI 90 response at week 48 (p<0,0001).[1]
